DESCRIPTION

The OW58 T-Chair distinctive expression challenges the art of the possible without compromising craftsmanship or comfort. The OW58 T-Chair's characteristic T-shaped backrest, which has given the chair its nickname, and beautifully carpentry transitions that embody both classic and modern lines gives the chair a light and elegant appearance.

DESIGNER

Ole Wanscher (1903-1985) was integral to the core aesthetic and functionality of modern Danish design. His classic and contemporary designs made him popular. In 1958, the Danish newspaper Politiken wrote: "Owning a Wanscher chair is an adventure every day and will be so even several hundred years from now, for this is how long it lasts". Today, his modern classics are still revered for their detail and his deep respect for materials.

PRODUCTION PROCESS

The chair's very organic shapes make working with the wood particularly time consuming. The parts of the chair are clocked on a machine, after which there are especially many hours of handwork in gluing and sanding the joints between the different parts. The cup piece / back is made of one piece of wood, which is divided in the middle and reassembled at top joints to get the same vein structure in the wood.
